

Coolidge Faces Many Changes

Appointment of Secretary of State Hughes to Be Followed by Changes Among Ambassadors and Possibly More Cabinet Changes—Changes in Foreign Policy Possible.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, Jan. 12.—President Coolidge will begin his own administration on the 4th of March next, with a cabinet that will bear but little resemblance to the one he inherited from the late President Harding after a half ago.

Important shifts in the diplomatic corps are also in the making, and will emphasize the "new deal" that Washington expects to see when Mr. Coolidge begins being president "in his own right."

Of the cabinet which Mr. Coolidge took over from the Harding regime, not now have gone or are going, and remain—Mellon, Hoover, Weeks, Davis, New and Work. Of these, the expectation prevails that all but Secretary Mellon and Secretary Hoover will retire by the 4th of March.

There will also be a vacancy in the agricultural department due to Secretary Gore's becoming governor of West Virginia. Recent developments have indicated that Robert D. Carey, governor of Wyoming, now head of the Coolidge agricultural commission, will be appointed to this post.

Secretary of War Weeks has not been in good health recently. He is credited with a desire to retire on this account.

Secretary of Labor Davis has already informed Mr. Coolidge of his wish to retire, and the president has indicated he will accept it.

In the cases of Postmaster General New and Secretary of the Interior Work, personal considerations are said to be impelling them to private life.

Secretary Mellon is credited with a wish to remain in the treasury at least until he sees the principles of his cherished tax plan embodied into legislation.

Secretary Hoover recently told friends that Mr. Coolidge wanted him to remain and that he had agreed to do so.

There probably will be changes in three of the most important embassies in Europe as a result of the retirement of Secretary of State Hughes and the appointment of Frank B. Kellogg now at London, to succeed him.

The London vacancy is assured. For this post there is no dearth of candidates. The belief exists in Washington, however, that Alanson B. Houghton, now ambassador in Germany, will be shifted to London.

The president is understood to think highly of Mr. Houghton.

This shift, if made, would leave a vacancy in Berlin. There is also a prospective vacancy in Paris, as Ambassador Myron T. Herrick has informed the president of his desire to retire.

Senator Medill McCormick, of Illinois, is understood to be the foremost candidate for the Paris post. He speaks French fluently and wants the appointment. He has been a frequent White House visitor lately.

The general belief prevails in Washington that after March 4, President Coolidge will be found assuming a more personal direction of foreign affairs.

Both under Harding and under Coolidge, Secretary of State Hughes has had almost a free hand in the direction of American interests abroad, and in some of his policies—notably those affecting Russia and the World Court, he has been constantly at loggerheads with the Senate. One of his most persistent critics has been Senator Borah, Republican of Idaho, now chairman of the powerful foreign relations committee of the Senate, and the outstanding champion of Russian recognition.

Crises between Borah and Mr. Coolidge's closest personal relationship than is generally realized. The Idaho senator is a frequent visitor and adviser to the White House.

Consequently, the capital expects to see a softening of the Russian policy after March 4. Secretary Hughes has been a staunch and some times bitter opponent of any dealings whatever with the Soviet government. It is due to his stern and unyielding opposition that the United States today is the only major power in the world that does not have relations of one kind or another with Moscow. Senator Borah has argued consistently against this rigid policy, and there have been indications recently that his missionary work has not been entirely in vain where Mr. Coolidge is concerned.

Ambassador Kellogg's policies are not expected to "bridge" so much as those of Hughes. Kellogg has been in the Senate and was a member of the foreign relations committee. He was one of the mildest of the mild moderates in the Senate of National Right. This attitude of his was described by his friends as "judicial" and by his political opponents as "timid." Representative of this the "moderate" generalist that Mr. Coolidge intends to take a great part in the direction of foreign affairs under Kellogg, than he has under Secretary Hughes, with Senator Borah's voice no longer considered factor in future policies.

100 Homeless From Incendiary

New Rochelle Has Many Thrilling Rescues by Police and Firemen in Series of Night Fires.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New Rochelle, N. Y., Jan. 12.—One hundred persons were homeless today and police were seeking a pyromaniac following a series of fires which destroyed three dwellings with a few blocks of each other. Hundreds were driven to the windswept streets in the dark.

Police agreed the series were of suspicious origin. They said that, so far as they know, no one had been injured.

Several spectacular rescues were made. Only one person, a woman who fainted, required medical attention.

Detective Michael Lynch climbed a telephone pole to the third floor of one of the tenements and shouted to a woman standing at a window there to throw to him the baby she had in her arms. Lynch caught the infant with one hand as he clung to the pole with the other and made his way safely to the ground. Again he ascended the pole and this time called to the woman to wait while firemen were unhooking a long ladder. Firemen carried her to safety a few seconds before the flames shattered the window at which she had stood.

Private Michael Tinko, of Fort Sloocom, ran through dense smoke up two flights of stairs and carried four children, two under his arms and the other two clinging to his neck, to the street. Firemen making their way through the building came upon an old man seated near a window on the second floor, partially overcome by smoke, and carried him to safety.

Kellogg Gives Satisfaction

France Welcomes Appointment of American Ambassador to Succeed Secretary Hughes but Considers Appointment Only Temporary.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Paris, Jan. 12.—The Parisian press today welcomed the appointment of Frank B. Kellogg as secretary of state to succeed Charles E. Hughes, placing great reliance in Kellogg's first hand knowledge of European conditions, but expressing fear of Senator Borah's influence on American foreign relations. Borah's suggestion that the French debt to America be used to force France to disarm was recalled.

Kellogg Like Coolidge.

Ambassador Kellogg, interviewed for Le Matin by Stephen Lausanne, said: "The president, who is a silent man himself, probably has chosen me as secretary of state because I know how to keep my mouth shut."

Kellogg's silence, which has been especially noticeable during the Allied financial conference, does not impress Pertinax of the Echo de Paris, who prophesies that Kellogg will be secretary of state only a short time.

"Kellogg is probably only of transitional importance," Pertinax said. "In a few months he may surrender his place to a secretary of state who has a more vigorous policy."

Hughes at Zenith.

The Journal considers that Hughes is stepping out at the zenith of the success of his foreign policy.

"Hughes is leaving while the Daves plan is still in its honeymoon, while Americans still imagine they can put their hands into European affairs without getting their fingers caught in the machinery," the Journal said. "But the awakening will come when Americans learn that the dollar has withdrawn the chestnuts from the fire for the pound sterling."

Calls Borah Captious.

Loucheux in Petit Journal says: "Although Secretary Hughes's resignation is largely attributable to disagreements with Senator Borah on foreign policy, it is improbable that his successor, Mr. Kellogg, will be able to satisfy such captious critics as Borah."

Plan to Pay Debt.

L'Information then suggested a plan for payment of the debt. This plan would provide that a portion of the German-Dawes receipts to France be assigned to America to be credited to the French debt. This, L'Information pointed out, would reduce the debt one-third.

"If the United States would agree," the article continued, "to reduce the total French debt to America to 4,000,000,000 gold marks—present value—then we could assign to the United States 12 per cent of our percentage from Germany."

Furthermore we could guarantee a payment of 1,000,000,000 gold francs, which America would agree to leave deposited in the Bank of France."

Houghton May Succeed Kellogg

By Telegram to The Freeman.

London, Jan. 12.—Diplomatic circles here believe that Alanson B. Houghton, ambassador to Germany, will be appointed to succeed Frank B. Kellogg at the court of St. James. It was learned today. While it was thought that the British government would accept this appointment, it is understood that some of the "die hard" Tories fear that Houghton is over sympathetic toward Germany.

Dublin, Jan. 12.—New York bankers will be asked to assist the Irish Free State to float a loan of $100,000,000. It was learned here today. The loan would bear interest at 5 per cent.

Unlike the $50,000,000 loan floated last year, this issue would be placed in whole abroad. Several New York financiers were said to have offered the Free State a loan last year but the terms were said not to be acceptable to President Cosgrave and Finance Minister Birtch.

Gasoline-Fed Kitchen Stove Exploded—Mother Successful in Giving Alarm But Perishes When She Returns to House.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Caldwell, N. J., Jan. 12.—Seven negroes, six members of the George Gootch family and an unidentified woman boarder, were burned to death when a gasoline-fed kitchen fire flared up in an explosion that destroyed their home today. Horace Jordan, another negro, was severely burned.

The mother, after starting the blaze, ran out into the street to call for help, then returned and perished with her five children and a negro who lived with them.

The seven bodies were recovered from the ashes of the frame house by firemen, who made futile attempts to subdue the flames with chemicals. No water supply was available near the house, located on St. John's road north of this city.

Snow Followed Cold Wave Here

The cold wave that held the city in its grip the past few days succeeding the January thaw, was followed by a snow storm Sunday night and this morning, and snow fell to a depth of several inches. The snow fall, however, was light and was easily removed with the aid of a broom by householders who were out early before it became packed underfoot. The weather continued brisk and cold. All day Sunday a keen, biting wind prevailed, and it proved a most disagreeable day for those who had to be out doors.

Church Canvass Held Sunday

The church canvass to ascertain the religious affiliation, if any, of the residents of Kingston was held Sunday afternoon when two hundred men canvassed the city under the direction of Secretary Louis S. Coe of the Chamber of Commerce, who was chairman of the canvass. The various wards of the city had been assigned to the various Protestant churches and each church had a ward to canvass. As soon as the canvass is completed the results will be tabulated.

Governor and Son Arrested

Warrants Served on Retiring Kansas Executive and Son Charging Bribery with Alleged Sale of Pardons—Governor Then Proceeds to Inaugural of His Successor.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Topeka, Kas., Jan. 12.—Governor Jonathan M. Davis and his son, Russell, were formally placed under arrest shortly before noon today when the warrants charging bribery in connection with the alleged sale of pardons were served.

They gave bond immediately and then proceeded under technical custody to the inaugural ceremonies for Governor Davis's successor.

There is one charge against the governor and his son in the language of the warrant, it accuses the governor of "accepting a bribe of $1,250 through his son, acting as agent, for the pardon of Fred W. Polman."

Under the Kansas statutes, conviction carries with it a sentence from 1 to 7 years in the state penitentiary or a fine of from $200 to $1,000 or both.

Delay in the morning proceedings was caused by the re-writing and signing of the information.

"They are making a big mistake and a mighty bad move," was the only comment of Governor Davis, regarding the indictments against him.

The sensational incidents of the morning showed but little on the surface of the inaugural ceremonies. The governor rode in the parade side by side with his successor.

The crowds were silent. At the auditorium where the inauguration took place, there was little applause and little comment.

"I guess they are trying to humiliate me," the governor commented as he submitted to technical arrest in the city court, where he went as soon as the charges were filed.

"I'll take the full dose and go through with it. Of course, my family won't be there."

Russell Davis, with his mother, stayed in the family home.

There was silence as the outgoing governor made his farewell address.

"I came into the governorship a farmer," he said. "I am leaving the office a farmer. I have battled the best I could for what I thought the farmers and workers were entitled to."

His voice broke then—came back strongly, and he went through to the end of his speech without visible sign of being affected by what had taken place.

Nor was there any reference to investigations to come in the inaugural address of Governor Ben Paulsen.

When Davis was through, he took a chair and sat on the platform until the new governor had taken the oath and had completed his address. Then with a few friends, he walked through the crowd and went to his home.

The charges are based on Russell Davis's alleged acceptance of $1,250 when delivering a pardon from his father to a convicted forger. Those waiting for the pardon had witnessed listening in to the conversation he had with Russell, it is said.

When Russell was trapped, the alleged witnesses state, he returned the money. Both Governor Davis and his son have declared that the executive knew nothing of the matter and that Russell "was trying to make a little on the side."

Fog Disorganizes London Again

By Telegram to The Freeman.

London, Jan. 12.—The city life of London was almost wholly disorganized today as the result of a thirty-six hour fog. Economic losses are estimated to have reached $5,000,000. One person is dead, scores were injured and criminal activity has greatly increased.

During the night bus and street car service was withdrawn. The police force was depleted because some officers could not reach their stations. Others could not locate their beats. As a result, criminals worked unmolested in numerous districts.

Street collisions were frequent, one person being killed and dozens hurt.

London was dark as night today although the fog had lifted slightly. Scientists estimated there were tons of soot suspended over the city.

It came in John's name and the father himself and a policeman were waiting at the telegraph office when he was called for the money today. He was arrested on a charge of abduction. The youngsters ran away from home January 8.

One of the first important appointments which Governor Smith is expected to submit to the Senate for confirmation is that of Colonel Frederick S. Greene as state commissioner of public works. Colonel Greene has served in that capacity for the last two years.

Because of the stir caused among the Republican leaders by the governor's recommendation in his annual message that the Legislature investigate the condition of the barge canal, it was predicted there was a chance the Republican majority in the upper house might refuse to confirm the appointment of Colonel Greene.

Bonus Bill Stated.

An important bill which is slated to be introduced tonight will provide for an amendment to the bonus law enacted last year to give a bonus to relatives of all deceased world war veterans. The governor and the Republican leaders are in accord on this proposal. At first it was believed the state would have to appropriate at least $1,500,000 for this bonus, but it was discovered at the bonus commission that it would have sufficient funds left from the $450,000 bond issue to pay a bonus to relatives of dead veterans. The bonus will be at the rate of $10 for each month the veteran served, the total not to exceed $150.

Increase in Budget.

The tentative budget which has been submitted to the Legislature by Governor Smith and the state board of estimate and control recommends an increase of $5,527,084 in appropriations for current expenses and fixed charges of state government over the last fiscal year. The total budget recommendations is $123,938,877.

$100,000,000 for Government.

It was said at the Capitol today the total appropriations which the 1925 Legislature will be called upon to make will be nearly $160,000,000.

Reduce Income Tax.

A Republican measure already has been introduced calling for a 25 per cent reduction in the state income tax. The Democrats are expected to introduce a similar bill this week. The governor and the Republican legislative leaders have agreed the income tax should be reduced again this year at least 25 per cent.

DENIES THAT DALEY WILL SUCCEED FISHER

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 12.—Denial that Major Charles D. Daley would succeed Robert T. Fisher as head coach of Harvard's varsity eleven, was made today by Fred Moore, graduate manager of the University's athletics. Moore's statement followed published reports of Daley's appointment.

So far as the Harvard Athletic Committee is concerned we do not expect to have Major Daley for head coach next year," said Moore. "There will be several meetings of the advisory committee and the athletic committee must ratify the choice of the advisory committee before an appointment can be made."

Daley was a former Harvard star quarterback and a West Point coach.

Deficient Diet Weakens Teeth

State Health Department Advises What Foods Are Needed in Order to Have Strong Teeth.

That deficiencies in diet and the general health of the expectant mother have a profound effect on the structural development of the unborn child was stated by Dr. Elizabeth Gardiner, associate director of the division of maternity, infancy and child hygiene of the State Department of Health, in a radio talk broadcast Friday from Station WGY, Schenectady.

"Anyone who has waited his turn in a dentist's office," said Dr. Gardiner, "cannot but be impressed with the amount of human misery connected with the teeth. Toothache is unlike a good many diseases, one attack of which produces a lasting immunity. On the contrary, with toothache it is often a case of 'once had, seldom without.' It is doubtless true that given a good, strong set of well-developed teeth, regular use of the tooth-brush, dental floss, and other methods of cleanliness will preserve them from decay and abscess. But how many people have that sort of teeth. Not only do we need to know how best to preserve the teeth we have, but we should know more about how strong, hard teeth can be produced—teeth which will be able to withstand the destructive action of the germs which are always present in every mouth, and of the acids formed by fermentation of food particles left between the teeth."

"The expectant mother occupies the strategic position in this endeavor for her unborn baby has already started to build its first teeth by the fifth month of its before-birth existence. The general health of the mother previously and subsequently, and especially the food she eats, have a direct bearing upon the quality of the tooth structure the baby is building. If the mother suffers no serious illness during this period, if her food contains in proper proportion the growth elements known as vitamins, it is probably that the baby will have a set of first teeth that are well-formed, hard and resistant to decay. If, however, her food is deficient in these factors, or if her general health is impaired, the baby's teeth almost certainly will be defective when they appear; that is, the tooth structure will not be hard and dense enough to resist the processes of decay."

Dr. Gardiner then listed the foods necessary for the expectant mother. "First, milk," she stated, "one pint to one quart daily, for milk is the best source of organic lime; second, the leafy vegetables, which rank next to milk in lime value, such as spinach, lettuce, chard, beet tops, turnip tops, dandelion greens and raw or well-cooked cabbage, one of these to be eaten daily. Other foods helpful for good formation are fresh fruit and vegetables, butter, eggs, (if the doctor allows them) whole wheat bread and whole grain cereals such as Scotch or Irish oatmeal, wheat, cornmeal or natural brown rice."

"Furthermore, in her desire to help in the formation of good teeth for her baby, the mother should visit her dentist regularly throughout her pregnancy. 'The mother's duty in helping the baby have good teeth is not completed when the baby is born. By nursing him she gives him the best food for further tooth development. Moreover, the act of nursing aids in the development of the baby's jaws, which is necessary for proper subsequent growth of the teeth.'

"As the baby grows older, let the doctor advise when to start giving him orange or tomato juice. When he is still older, about the fifth or sixth month, the doctor will again advise you about adding other foods to the baby's diet—cereals, vegetable juices, milk, soups, etc., all of which help to improve the quality of the baby's teeth even after they have been 'cut.'

"Just as any illness on the part of the mother previous to the birth of her baby may affect unfavorably the structure of the baby's teeth, so any illness of the baby himself, such as measles, scarlet fever, mumps and rickets may interfere with their normal development. If your baby is weak and backward in growth, ask your doctor about giving him cod liver oil, which contains a rich store of the elements which help to produce strong bones and teeth."

"Just as soon as the baby's teeth appear, the mother should commence cleaning them, and as soon as he is taking more solid foods this should be done after each meal. After two years of age regular visits should be made to the dentist so that any faults in development of the teeth may be found and corrected."

"During all this time careful supervision over the baby's diet is necessary. This should contain plenty of milk, fruit juice, well-cooked whole grain cereals, fresh vegetables, and some hard whole wheat bread or toast to induce chewing, so as to help develop the jaws, and thus provide sufficient space for the second teeth."

"By paying attention to these little details of diet, both for the mother and the baby, and by the exercise of the rules of cleanliness and care of the teeth during infancy and early childhood, most children should grow up with a set of good, strong hard teeth—teeth which will not decay nor abscess easily, and thus many of the indefinite ills of later life may be prevented."

FIRST U. S. DEEP-SEA SHIP.

The first American-built vessel to make a deep-sea voyage, the Trial, was launched 223 years ago today, January 12, 1642. The builder was Captain Thomas Cortmore, who was also the first commander of the vessel. The Trial was conducted at Boston and was of 165 tons burden. In these days of Leviathans and Mauretania's few persons would care to trust their lives to such a craft for even a short voyage, but in her day the Trial was considered a good ship and brought a rich return to her owners.

PHERTINA.

Phertina was the wife of Battus, king of Cyrene, and the mother of Arcesilaus, who was driven from his kingdom in a sedition and assassinated. After her son's death she recovered the kingdom by the aid of Amasis, king of Egypt, and to avenge the murder of her son, she caused all his assassins to be crucified round the walls of Cyrene, also cut off the breasts of their wives and hung them near their husbands. It is said she was devoured by worms, which probably had reference to the remorse she must have felt for her cruelties. She lived 524 B. C.

Henry, held. In fact, wherever the stirring tales of adventure and unique personal biography are cherished, there is the name of Jack London known and loved and many persons who had never made the acquaintance of the author or felt his irresistible personal charm, read with a pang of regret of his passing in 1916, after a very brief illness.

His death is thought to have been caused at the comparatively youthful age of 41 from the results of some of the tropical fevers contracted while in the South Seas. He died November 22, 1916.

INCOME TAX IN A NUTSHELL.

Who? Single persons who had net income of 1,000 or more or gross income of $5,000 or more, and married couples who had net income of $2,500 or more or gross income of $5,000 or more must file returns.

When? The filing period is from January 1 to March 15, 1923.

Where? Collector of internal revenue for the district in which the person lives or has his principal place of business.

How? In instructions on Form 1040A and Form 1040; also the law and regulations.

What? Two per cent normal tax on the first $4,000 of net income in excess of the personal exemptions and credits. Four per cent normal tax on the next $4,000. Six per cent normal tax on the balance of net income. Surtax on net income in excess of $10,000.

YOUR INCOME TAX.

No. 1.

Your income tax for the year 1922 is less, in proportion to your income, than was the tax of 1921. A rate reduction, however, is not the only benefit afforded by the revenue act of 1924. Increase in the exemption for married persons, a 25 per cent reduction on "earned income," and other changes in revenue legislation are of immediately interest to every taxpayer.

The revenue act of 1924 requires that returns be filed by every single person whose net income for 1924 was $1,000 or more, or whose gross income was $5,000 or more, and by every married couple whose aggregate net income was $2,500 or more, or whose aggregate gross income was $5,000 or more. Last year returns were required of married couples whose aggregate net income was $2,000 or more. Husband and wife, living together, may include the income of each in a single joint return, or each may file a separate return showing the income of each. Net income is gross income less certain specified deductions for business expenses, losses, bad debts, contributions, etc.

The period for filing returns is from January 1 to March 15, 1923. The return, accompanied by at least one-fourth of the amount of tax due, must be filed with the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer has his legal residence or has his principal place of business.

Insects on Plants

Insects are quite apt to gather on plants after they are taken indoors. To remove this annoyance use soap-suds for watering the plants or simply hot water. Fill a cup and with a spoon pour the very hot water, beginning at the edge of the pot and pouring each spoonful nearer to the plant, but be careful not to get any on the stalks. If one application does not effectually remove the pests, repeat the process the following day.

An honest man's word

MORE than three hundred years ago, Miguel de Cervantes said: "An honest man's word is as good as his bond." Advertisers must be honest men, if they would remain advertisers. Their announcements are signed. They must tell the truth in their advertising. For their own protection, as well as yours.

What would it profit a man to advertise "Pure, virgin-wool suits," only to have you discover they were shoddy? You would soon separate the sheep from the cotton. And you would never deal with that man again. And, further, you would tell all your acquaintances what a chink he was.

As a matter of business, if not of personal principle, an advertiser must tell the truth in his signed announcements. That's what makes the advertising columns of this paper such reliable guides to honest merchandise. The printed announcements are bonds between you and the advertiser.

Read the advertisements. Read them regularly. To be informed on the newest and best in everything. To save hours of shopping. To make the family purse do a bigger, better job. To get goods of known quality at the most attractive price.

You would not plan a motor trip without first consulting road-maps and guide-books. Is it logical to plan a shopping trip without first consulting the advertisements? Read the advertisements. Then go to the stores with your mind more than half made up.

A signed advertisement is, in effect, a sealed bond between you and the advertiser.

President Warns Against Greed

President Coolidge, in a warning against the danger of greed and selfishness in the building trade, was received by President Coolidge today to members of the Associated General Contractors of America, in informal address in the East room of the White House.

Stressing the great benefits to be derived from justly conducted trade associations, the president went back nearly a century and a half to quote Adam Smith, who observed:

"People of the same trade seldom put together even for a recreation or diversion, but the conversation tends to a conspiracy against the public or in some contrivance to raise prices."

"We have had a good deal of evidence in our own time," continued the president, "that this dictum of the wise old Scotchman is quite as applicable in one generation as in another. It is this trait of human nature which has in more recent years compelled society to adopt restrictive measures to protect itself."

Selecting Frocks for Young Girls

Beautiful Modes Available for Little Misses to Wear at Parties.

A thrill, and one of the sweetest, comes once in a lifetime when the first party dress is selected, says a fashion writer in the New York Times. Nothing has ever seemed or will ever seem quite so important and nothing has ever been known to give more satisfaction, more beatific contentment. It is the early dawn of that peace of mind and peace that come from the feeling that one is well dressed, and to the woman of discriminating taste this feeling is of supreme importance all through her life.

Whenever that great event happens, whether it is just a children's party or something more pretentious a few years later, the occasion is never to be forgotten. The frolics of very little people mean to them a fresh frock not too good to be spoiled by play. The real thrill comes when the affair is a real party.

Parents who have the understanding that all properly trained parents should have make a supreme effort to meet the occasion, and a clever couturiere co-operates with more enthusiasm than she can ever feel in the work she does for grownups. It is a challenge to the intuition, the taste, the fine sense of propriety in the artist, the making of this party dress, and it is not an easy task. It is vitally important that the young person shall show she is no longer a baby. Also that she shall not appear too grownup or be dressed too sophisticated.

We Americans have much to learn from the people of England and the continent. They all delight to dress their children as "young" as possible, which seems to keep them so. This is what every woman devoutly desires, but the thing that is most elusive among the small fry this side of the water. The shingled head has done much to equalize the years, and the little girl and the debutante are so much alike that the distinction is not always simple. Not any of these considerations discount the importance of that first party dress.

The styles in frocks for little girls at the difficult age, when angular lines and awkwardness are the rule, have never been more attractive than they are this season. With infinite skill Parisian artists have modified the extremes with which even the children's and misses' clothes have lately been marked and have seized upon the new features that best become the younger people. The result is a display of charming frocks, coats and accessories as varied in a way, as the mature models, but consistently and properly "feminine."

Short Puffed Sleeves.

The latest ideas in sleeves—the short puffed sleeve that gives such a quaint effect in dancing frocks and the long sleeve that adds demure dignity to the daytime dress—are among the welcome changes in styles for children. Another change is the length of skirt, still so very short for the tiny tot, but perceptibly longer for the girl whose legs so quickly outgrow her minuette. And there are the collar and cuff sets that add such an air of delicacy to a simple frock.

These points and others combine to present a simple style that is delightful. Illustrated in a number of models created by some of the most important designers in Paris. People of such practice as Paquin, Aline Rejard, Chanel and Vionnet delight in making fashions for young and very young people, giving them all the subtle charm, the quality and tone one might look for in the garments of a lady of importance in the best milieu. In these the most admirable restraint and the most sense of dress are reflected. Many of the little models are works of art in the latest manner in the designing of children's clothes.

Again, for example, leaves for the moment his larger problems to create a sweetly pretty, altogether Parisian little party dress of baby blue tulle, trimmed with border half the length of the skirt, with a cross-wise shirring and strips of silver embroidery. Some of this shirring is applied on the front of the bodice, which is only slightly longer than the normal waistline. A narrow belt of silver ribbon is tied in a bow-knot, with ends at one side.

In sharp contrast to this winsome frock is a merry one of green and pink velvet made quite plain, with a suggestion of the directoire in its lines. The waist is perfectly plain, with a deep cape collar of plaited chiffon opening in front. The skirt, which ends just below the knee, is laid in deep box plaits, and has wee stiff cravat bows of ribbon sewn each side of the front as the plaits meet.

Of still another quite different type is a robe de style done by a French modiste, in apple green tulle. This frock has no furrows, but the skirt which is gathered full to the plain, sleeveless bodice, is trimmed with three bands of the silk, each scalloped at the edge. This little dress has the air of a "period" costume and is quite long. The little low-heeled slippers of green kid are worn with flesh-colored chiffon stockings.

Material is important. Lanvin's things for children are usually important as to material, and they have a certain dignity which requires much skill to keep from them any suggestion of mature styles. One lately shown by a New York importer is distinctly smart, of dark blue velvet, embroidered on the pockets and down the front with gold-brown silk. The waist is a deep blouse. The skirt is laid in kilt plaits around the side and back, and is barely knee-length.

In another model from this house, a coat of hunter's green velvet is cut in straight line with a high, rather military collar, and is embroidered in silver down the front, wrists and neck. Lanvin completes these chic little affairs by designing for each a variant of the cloche bonnet, and invariably adds ribbon streamers at the back.

Black velvet is used by many of the designers of dresses for young girls, and most people consider it well to have at least one black velvet frock in the girl's winter wardrobe. One model just brought out is unusually smart. It is cut after the pattern of the latest blouse, almost to the knee, to which is added a slightly godetted flounce having large motifs in scarlet silk chain-stitch embroidery applied over the joining. A piping in scarlet silk outlines all the edges of the frock, which is sleeveless and cut in slightly bateau line at the neck.

In a unique and particularly dainty little party dress, pale blue grosgrain ribbon with plicated edges and shot with silver is used in straight bands across the neck, in stripes down the sides from shoulder to hem, and tied in a bow to hold the slight fullness at the waistline under each arm.

Ribbon is in Favor.

The vogue of ribbon in children's frocks is illustrated in many different styles. On one delicious little frock, pale yellow moire ribbon is sewn perpendicularly in strips close together, covering the entire front and back of the dress of fine white net, over a slip of peach-colored tulle. Ribbon of the same shade of yellow in a wide width is drawn around the hips.

Frock of Pale Green Crepe, Neckline Edged With Ribbon.

caught at one side with a tiny bow of French flowers and tied at the other side in a large bow with ends that hang below the edge of the skirt. Ribbon is used again in an adorable party dress of flowered georgette in shades of peach, pinkish blue and gold, with a slip of apricot-colored silk. The ribbon is in narrow folds to edge a deep double cape collar back and front. This same little plaiting outlines the waist and forms a choker and ends over one hip. These are among the many attractive costumes received from the best designers of children's clothes, and are intended to be worn by little girls ten to thirteen years old.

The coats, the little trousers, the raglan, the long straight coat of any one of the new materials, made three-quarter or seven-eighths length, are all fashionable.

CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT.

Growing opposition to the Federal child labor amendment has been reported for some time, and now the New York World's country-wide inquiry indicates rather definitely that the amendment will be defeated. So far only one state, Arkansas, has ratified the amendment. Three states—Georgia, North Carolina and Massachusetts, the latter by referendum vote—have rejected it. Only ten more adverse decisions are needed to accomplish its defeat, and ten of the governors of states consulted predict failure, while twelve expect ratification and the remainder are non-committal. The reports of the World's correspondents who have canvassed the country indicate that there will be further additions to the negative column. There is nothing sectional in the opposition. Maine, Massachusetts and Oregon lining up with North Carolina, Georgia and Texas against the proposal.

With good reason public sentiment in all sections, although demanding adequate protection of the young, is opposed to the movement to vest in Congress the power to limit and control the employment of all persons under eighteen years of age. The people of agriculture as well as industrial states are startled and disposed to call a halt. It is recognized not only that the age limit of eighteen years is radically excessive but that the ever-encroaching Federal power should not be given such command over the home—a dangerous step forward in the march of Federal centralization, which has already reached a stage never dreamed of by the authors of American institutions. It is pointed out that most states already provide adequate protection for the young, that the few backward states are bound to come into line, and convincingly argued that the matter should be left with states for various reasons, including the fact that enforcement depends on local support.

TOUGH LUCK OF TWO THIEVES.

Two negro burglars, named in the accounts only as Paul and Julius, decided to rob a fur-shop on the eleventh floor of a thirteen story building in New York, and got themselves into trouble partly because their plan was a poor one at best and partly because of the unforeseen results of the recent blizzard. They went up in the elevator and hid successfully, but by the small hours of the night the roof was slippery as well as unbearably cold. Nevertheless they persisted in their fool plan. Paul lowered Julius over the edge of the roof so that he could swing, kick through a glass of the fur-shop window, then swing inside, drop to the floor, unlock the door, and the two could then make a getaway loaded with expensive furs. But Julius found himself "too cold" to kick and swing as he wished, and then Paul found himself too numb and lacking in "elbow grease" to haul his confederate back to the roof. So there they were, stalled and helpless.

To the casual observer there might have been a touch of comedy in a shivering darky dangling, kicking and "cussing" in a sleet storm 100 feet above an inhospitable pavement, but there was no comedy in the show for straining Paul, let alone dangling Julius. Presumably the latter's picturesque eloquence prevailed on the former, who finally managed to tie the rope around a pipe and then wait for help. Of course the only help obtainable at that hour was the police, and the two venturesome burglars of color were soon in jail. This was a joyful exchange to the dangling Julius, but not any too welcome a culmination to Paul, particularly after there was intense to reflect that he might have rejected his first worthy impulse, quietly made his own escape, and left his friend to dangle high in the blizzard until daylight brought rescue.

Blanco Thomas, the Spanish novelist and author of the recent political pamphlet, "Attorno XIII Communista," declined to accept a challenge for a duel from a less distinguished personage than Gen. Primo de Rivera or King Alfonso himself. And M.

there is anything in the sentiment attributed to Churchill: "The pen is mightier than the sword." Blanco is rightfully standing upon his dignity. He may consider himself fortunate, however, that he is literally standing on French instead of Spanish soil.

Before it is razed Madison Square Garden will first have a three-day farewell party, but it can hardly eclipse that eleven-day one of last June.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M. D.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.)

LUCK.

A popular novelist stated recently, that the older she became the less she believed in luck.

A significant sentence was "There is no ground in which good luck plants itself so readily, as that of mental and physical health." If you'll just think about that for a few minutes I believe you'll see her point.

In other words opportunities are everywhere. What you've got with which to seize them, and use them, is just what your folks gave you in body and brain, and what you've been doing with it since you received them.

And the point about it all is that they work in together so well. If you are a keen student, right up to your job, and ready to take the big things, but your body is not strong, you will often have to pass it up to someone else with perhaps less brain power, but more body power. And if you have an unusually good body, and have strengthened it further by games or work, but have neglected to "fit" yourself mentally, then also will you miss opportunity or as you would say be "out of luck."

I have in mind a clever salesman, a lecturer on salesmanship, who "lost out" on a big proposition some years ago, because of his attacks of indigestion, said attacks being entirely due to the neglect of his teeth—no grinders—or molar teeth, to chew up his food small enough, and allow his saliva to mix well with it. And you and I have both seen strong rugged fellows fool away their time at school or business, and when opportunity came were not ready for the step up, because they had not prepared themselves for it.

I have in mind a couple of brothers holding the highest positions in one of the biggest organizations in the whole world.

Folks say that they hold them because their father was a big stockholder in the company.

That may have helped, but one of them spent ten hard grinding years after he graduated from college, preparing himself in another organization, before he was called to this company, and the other spent eleven years of drudgery on two continents getting ready for his "soft" job with the company.

WHY

Oldtime Business Idea Must Be Abandoned

Starting at the bottom and working up used to mean moving through one department after another, so that when a man came to be head of the business he had a thorough understanding of its every phase. This is no longer possible. Organizations have become too large and too highly articulated. The problems are too complex and too diverse. A young man who set out to learn in practice every phase of a large business (buying, designing, manufacturing, traffic, finance, credit, selling, advertising) is likely to have one of these experiences:

1. He will make a failure at one point or another, and be discharged or resign in discouragement.

2. He will make so striking a success in one department that he will become a fixture there, will be hired away, or will go out to start in business for himself as a specialist.

3. He will gallop through to a general executive position with no more than a superficial grasp of the real work of the department, because a lifetime is not long enough to let him master all of them.

Therefore, as our business units have grown larger, we have found fewer and fewer men competent to manage them, while at the same time the direction of specialized work becomes better.—Richard J. Walsh in the Century Magazine.

Why Grafting Increases Product of Grapevines

The propagation of American varieties of grapes by grafting on hardy root stocks, a method not generally followed by American grape growers, insures greater yields and much improvement in the quality of the fruit, according to two publications on the subject just issued by the New York agricultural experiment station at Geneva.

As a result of these tests, it is believed that American grapes can be materially improved in quality, that yields can be increased and that more vigorous vines can be obtained by bench-grafting desirable varieties on suitable stocks. At present the cost of grafted stock will probably be too great to warrant the commercial grower's changing over to planting stock propagated in this way. Improved methods of grafting should lower the cost, however, and eventually, when the supply of grafted vines is more abundant, this method of propagation should prove a boon to commercial grape growing.

Such well-known varieties as Delaware, Catawba, Niagara, Concord, Iona and Catwaba grafted on root stocks of Clinton, Riparia Gloire and Rupestris St. George and grown alongside of "own rooted" vines propagated in the usual way showed marked superiority over the latter in many ways, but especially with respect to greatly improved quality.

Why Custom Changed

In the Orient of old, malaria was a dispensation of Providence, and nobody thought of troubling the pools to kill the mosquito larvae. Incantations to the gods took the place of libations of petroleum poured on stagnant water. Today, in the western world, we find men turning from the gods to the little fishes. At a conference of malaria field workers in New Orleans the minnow was extolled as the natural enemy of mosquito. Those who used cisterns were urged to place minnows in them, and a plan was set afoot for putting the little fish in ponds and ditches that were the nurseries of noxious insects. It is another victory of applied science over superstitious ignorance.—Exchange.

Why He Was Delinquent

String Bean, a character around the water front, agreed to maintain a savings account, made one deposit, and there the matter rested. The head of the bank met him one day and proceeded to take him to task.

"Now look here, String Bean, you promised to put $5 in our bank every month. You haven't done so. You could easily do it."

"I s'pose I could, boss," responded the culprit easily. "Trouble with you banking men is you don't send around a man to threaten me."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Why the Leaves Fall

Leaves are a temporary part of the plant. Every plant has a period of rest due to annually recurring and unfavorable conditions of temperature and moisture or both, when the activity of life in the plant is suspended and it ceases to feed or grow. In such a state leaves have no function and are, therefore, needless. In a deciduous plant the leaves suddenly and conspicuously fall off; in others, called evergreens, most of the leaves are retained in the green condition until they are gradually replaced by new ones.

Why He Was Not Afraid

During a thunderstorm, James, a wireless friend, went out in the night, lowered his aerial and carefully turned one end of it to the soil.

Next morning, as he was going to town in his train, he told a fellow traveler what he had done.

"But weren't you afraid of the lightning striking you?" queried a rather incredulous listener.

"No," firmly replied James. "You see, I had some silk pajamas on, and I read that silk is a good insulating covering."—Science and Invention.

DELAMATER HAS HAD INTERESTING CAREER

W. J. Delamater, a member of the Joy-Dell Realty Corporation, real estate and insurance brokers at 151 West 72nd street, New York city, was in Kingston on Sunday to attend the ninetieth birthday celebration of his mother, who today is as active and spry as most women at the age of 90. Mrs. Delamater was born in Baltimore and has lived in Kingston since 1890. She is the mother of 12 children and is held in reverence by all who know her and the celebration in her honor was a most happy one. Mrs. Delamater's mother lived to be 104 years old. Her son, W. J. Delamater, has had a varied career. He was formerly U. S. Commissioner to the Argentine government and spent ten years in Mexico as the Associated Press representative. At one time he conducted the Monterey News, a newspaper that was published on the lines of conciliation between the United States and Mexico. Mr. Delamater was at the head of the organization that built the American Country Club in Mexico City. He said that he had been in every country in the world except Alaska. He being in a reminiscent mood, said that he began his career as salesman with Louis Meyers in 1886 at $2 a week on lower Broadway, one or two doors below where Max Gruenwald's shoe store is located.

NO JOINT MEETING.

Chairman of Common Council Zoning Committee Clears Up Error. To the Editor of The Freeman: Sir:—Will you kindly correct the statement made in a recent issue of your paper of an unsigned call for a joint meeting of the common council zoning committee and a committee made up of members of the Chamber of Commerce? No such joint meeting has been called by me and none is contemplated. The fact is that a meeting of the zoning committee is called for Tuesday evening, January 20, at 8:30 o'clock, and at that time it is hoped to get the ordinance under consideration.

The zoning ordinance has been on review at the office of the city clerk for thirty (30) days and every effort has been made to get the public to read the ordinance and view the maps. In fact the writer made public to take advantage of this thirty day opportunity to make suggestions, changes and amendments. If in that time the Chamber of Commerce has not seen fit to do so the fault is not the committee's. In due time the ordinance will come up before the common council and a public hearing will be granted and the Chamber of Commerce committee will have an opportunity to be heard. As stated above, no "joint meeting" has been called by the chairman of the zoning committee, but if the committee selected by the Chamber of Commerce should desire to attend the meeting of the common council zoning committee as spectators and guests of the zoning committee, a welcome is extended.

URBAN G. EDINGER,
Chairman of the Zoning Committee.

NATIONAL VOTE FRAUD COLLEGE REVEALED.

Dr. V. I. Sirovich, a "Smiling Greek" who has been operating a national school of ballot fixing have been described to a New York City grand jury by George Rothen, a chauffeur, who confessed that he was paid to take to the United States Attorney, who he believed was paid to go to by Nathan D. Perlman, Republican, New York District, Philadelphia, Boston, Jersey City and New Haven. He was among the cities in which Rothen and his "partner" in ballot fixing worked. He asserted he turned them over there after a course of instruction in the art of a "smiling Greek," which consisted of a head press with which they smoothed the ballot after being appointed and learned ballot: "I am the original ballot fixer." His claim, he said, were to large to have a suite of offices in various towns. Congressmen Perlman denied the charges.

It Will Actually Improve
The New DUCO Finish

Far from hurting Doco Finish, the fine silt contained in ordinary road mud actually improves its lustre. With a sponge and water, or even with a dry cloth, you can remove the mud and polish up the surface of Doco Finish at the same time!

Duco is made by the Du Pont Company. We have tested and confirmed every claim made for it. It is an epoch-making discovery, and the only radical improvement ever made in motor car finishes.

Neither sun nor engine heat can blister Doco, grease won't corrode it, rain, snow and hot water won't streak it, and it is so hard that it is difficult to scratch. Even bumps can hardly affect it!

With Doco on your car you can laugh at weather and wear. Its beautiful lustre and smooth surface will actually improve with use. Come to our shop and see how we have finished with Doco. You'll want this new finish on your car, too. It can be put on in one-third to one-half the usual time.

New York State's Catch of Fish

More Than Half Million Pounds Taken from Hudson River—Value of Shad Catch Exceeded $15,000.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Albany, Jan. 12.—The Bureau of Inland Fisheries of the Conservation Commission issued 2,211 licenses to persons to operate nets in the different waters of the state open to the taking of fish for commercial purposes, during the year 1923, the last year for which complete figures are available. The devices licensed include seines, traps, fykes, traps, machine traps, stake nets and gill nets, according to the annual report of Conservation Commissioner Alexander Macdonald.

The aggregate amount of fish taken by licensees, as reported by them, amounted to 5,442,943 pounds. For this catch they reported receiving $700,141.28.

There were more fish taken in 1923 than during any year since the commission discontinued its policy of licensing nets for use in the Finger Lakes in the taking of fish for commercial purposes. The catch of fish last year was larger by 2,471,607 pounds than the catch of the previous year, which in dollars and cents means that the fishermen had $219,988.75 more to divide for the season's work of 1923 than they did in 1922.

The total moneys the fishermen reported receiving for their product in 1923 amounted to $700,141.28, and as there were 2,211 licenses issued by the commission during this period, it means that each licensee earned slightly more than $316.66.

The total amount of moneys received by the commission in license fees from the fishermen during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, was $24,216.74. The average cost of a net license is less than $11, average amount each licensee earned, which is about 3-1-3 per cent of the value of the catch.

The Hudson River Catch.

The total catch of fish of all kinds reported taken from the waters of the Hudson river during the calendar year of 1923 was 333,557 pounds. The commercial value of his catch was $81,652.21. This is not, however, the total catch of fish, only about 30 per cent of the fishermen have made a report.

As is the case of late years, the species of fish in the river to yield the greatest poundage was the carp. 1923 there were reported taken 142,229 pounds of carp having a value of $32,109.52. The market value was exceptionally good in the Hudson river and adjacent waters bringing higher prices because of delivery being made alive to the large fish markets of New York city.

The other species of fish reported taken, which went to make up the reported 533,557 pounds for the river, were: Suckers, 112,970 pounds with a value of $13,600.92; striped perch, 24,381 pounds, valued at $2,774.66; bullheads, 20,797 pounds, which sold for $4,349.33; sunfish, 3,310 pounds, valued at $357.71; brook trout, 3,112 pounds, $276.50; pickerel, 479 pounds, $91.40; eels, 6,706 pounds, $1,060.88.

Value of Shad.

There is also to be added to the above 78,601 pounds of shad, having a value of $18,729.92. During the spring of 1924, the superintendent of inland fisheries personally planted 500,000 young pike perch and 500,000 ciscoes in the Hudson river above the Troy dam. The river is at present inhabited by pike perch but the introduction of the ciscoes is an experiment.

The fishing season of 1923 on Lake Erie was equal to that of several years ago, which was a record. The report of one company fishing out of Dunkirk and operating six boats shows 2,675,565 pounds of fish, having a value of $150,000, as having been taken. This is an average of $25,000 per boat. As the fishermen are employed on shares, a large part of this money went to them.

On Lake Erie, during the year 1923, the commission licensed 65 power, row and sail boats to be used in operating gill nets. It also licensed 24 trap nets. The holders of these licenses reported taking an aggregate of 7,144,732 pounds of fish and received $482,441.95 for it.

It would appear from these figures that the industry enjoyed its best year. With only 31 licenses issued by the commission in these waters, each licensee earned an average of $5,709.16.

New York state's biggest water frontage is on Lake Ontario, and while more licenses are issued to operate in this lake than in Lake Erie, there is nearly twenty times as much fish taken from Erie. Last year the commission issued 193 licenses to fishermen to operate nets in Lake Ontario, and the licenses reported taking but 391,164 pounds of fish, and receiving therefor $44,428.67.

This is an increase of 25,619 pounds of fish over the preceding year, but is not nearly the poundage that the lake should yield, considering the abundance of fish therein, particularly ciscoes.

IN FORMAL VEIN.

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

Having acquired the habit of pearls there is no length a woman will not go to gain effect—as the long chain sketched attests. Some triple and even greater numbered strands are worn, but among the newer arrangements are the long chains which may be wound once or twice around the throat. One is expected to have a variety of jewels as well as everything else these days, and of course, to preserve harmony in their assemblage.

Fashionable women continue to look with favor on frocks which are figure-revealing; the princess line as interpreted in the flaring skirt having many admirers. Fullness, achieved by godets, is strongly favored and tempts one, of course, to the possibilities of introducing contrasts in color. The general rule is that no matter how much of a flare may be visible from the front view, the back line must be straight.

More than one comment has been passed on the suggestion of the tailored line which has intruded into evening clothes. It is particularly apparent in coats, for no matter how gorgeous the fabric, evening coats have a severity which only comes from tailoring. Cloth of gold is no exception to this rule and is frequently made quite severely.

The transparent coat is a charming frivolity which is indulged in by those whose lot is cast in such places as do not require anything more of a coat than that it should round out the costume. Chiffon coats are numerous below the Mason and Dixon line.

PARIS INSISTS ON

VARYING THE SILHOUETTE

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

So much importance is attached to fabrics this season that a frock of ensemble which makes use of more than one should be doubly interesting. Naturally the favor of ensemble continues brings the question of linings into prominence. When the entire lining is not matched with the frock beneath, there is a border, or kicker, as this is called, which does match. Those who are daring enough to go in for prints and then particularly happy as a lining idea, the coat often having wide revers which are lined with the print.

The idea of contrasting prints is rather as does any simple idea which permits the introduction of a color or fabric contrast, color being more colorful, being of great practical and decorative value in the present scheme of things. At a recent advance showing of models for spring there were soft rose shades of henna, golden and pinky tones, many reddish brick shades, and medium gray, but even more significant was the liberal use of intense shades of blue in entire coats, tunics or dresses in both silk and wool. These shades, lighter than royal, took in the greenish Persian blue, the goblin, periwinkle and French tones. There were also subtle combinations of similar shades like peach and pink, or peach and yellow, sunset colorings as they are aptly termed.

In explanation of the sketches, it is of interest to know that they were made in Paris and are from the Crystal collection, which, like most French collections, and some American ones, shows a diversity of line. The first is of a soft, puffy color crepe, called, the costume jewel, or, perhaps, the second is more colorful, being of green, peach and yellow, and the third is a dance frock of orchid chiffon bleeding from a deep to pale tone and having interesting panels looping under the skirt, these being beaded in crystals. The neckline is V shaped at the back, many of the costumes subscribing to the décolleté age which is one shape front and another back. (Copyright, 1925, Fairchild.)

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

CHRISTMAS PENNIES

Mahalia wanted to have some Christmas presents and she wanted to do this with her very own money.

Mahalia Did Not Like Bread.

Now, Mahalia didn't have any money of her own. But she asked her daddy and her mother and her grandmother, who lived down the block, and her aunt and uncle, who lived four blocks away. If she couldn't earn some money.

"I should have lots of errands to run," said her daddy. "Around Christmas time at the store. People will want small packages in a hurry—string or ribbon or tissue paper, and every time you run an errand I'll pay you just as I'd pay anyone."

"I'd like to be paid in pennies," said Mahalia.

"Pennies will be paid to you," said her daddy.

"I will give you a penny a day if you eat a piece of bread at each meal without a fuss," said her mother. "And if you eat two pieces of bread I will give you two cents." Mahalia did not like bread.

Her uncle told her he had an old desk which he hadn't time to clean out, and he had always told her aunt that he would be doing it himself some time so she shouldn't bother about it. But now, he said, if Mahalia would take all the papers and put them together, and all the elastic bands in another pile and all the pencils without points in another and the ones with points in still another, and put everything nicely sorted and arranged on a table nearby and then dust the desk in every corner thoroughly, he would give her lots of pennies.

"I will go over the papers then and throw away what I don't want, and really have that desk in order. It would be useful to me if it were in order. As it is I don't want to put anything in it for fear it should get mixed up with all the trash there now."

"Of course you must be very, very particular in a job of this sort."

And Mahalia promised she would be. Her uncle told her that she could do it between supper time and bedtime, and then it would not interfere with the work she was going to do for her daddy.

Her aunt told her that when she got through with the work for her uncle she could spend several evenings fixing up work baskets about the house.

"The threads and pieces of silk are all mixed up. They're all in a tangled mass. I shall be delighted to see them in order."

Her grandmother told her that if she would come over and brush off the front steps each morning before she went up to the store she would get pennies for that.

"Of course the snow would be too heavy for you, but it would be a great help at this time to have the steps done, for we're so busy with cooking that we haven't time."

Well, as you can see, Mahalia had a busy time of it. But they all saw that she didn't overdo. She loved the work. Of course she wouldn't have cared to have been busy like that all the year.

But in the holidays before Christmas when everyone was so busy, anyway, it was fun to be busy.

And oh, how lovely it was when she had her own pennies to spend.

She had many pennies, too.

And she bought every Christmas present that year with her very own money she had earned.

She had felt so much more important, too, than if she had simply been given the money, and they all had said she had worked well.

The way those pennies she earned shined in the little bag she carried wherever she went! How beautifully they shined.

To Mahalia it seemed as though they kept saying:

"Merry Christmas from Mahalia."

And maybe, after all, that was really just what they were saying, those jingling, well-earned, jolly Christmas pennies!

Marriages That Led to Odd Relationships

Mysterious muddles sometimes arise out of second marriages. A Corsican girl married a man whose first wife was the sister of the girl's grandmother. This makes her her own mother's grand-aunt and her grandmother's sister-in-law. To her brother and sisters she is great-aunt. Finally, she is her own grand-niece. Her husband is the brother-in-law of his grandnephews and grand-nieces.

An elderly American became the grandfather of his six children, and his first wife's stepfather. He divorced his wife and married his mother-in-law. The widower who married in succession seven sisters contracted various relationships, says the Montreal
Family Herald and Star. This man started by marrying the eldest of the sisters, and subsequently went right down the line. Finally he led the seventh and last sister to the altar.

A German village is puzzled over the relationships resulting from the double marriage of a father and a son. The father, a widower, married the village belle. She then became a stepmother to her husband's forty-year-old son. The son, in his turn, met the girl's mother and married her. Consequently his father is now his son-in-law and he himself is his own grandfather. In the meantime, the village belle presented her husband with a baby daughter.
Clearly this child is sister-in-law to her grandmother!

They All Talk

A young man talks with pleasure, and an old man talks with ease; all water talks like some who walk—let them go on you please.

The preacher talks of sins and kings, of hell's eternal fury; the lawyer talks his lawcases of a dead but wily jury.

Then each one talks and talks and talks, each of his own speech proudly, forgetful of the potent fact that it's money that talks loudest.—A. P.

Today, from the position of leadership that has been so generously accorded, Packard celebrates its Silver Anniversary by making it possible for more men and women to have the car of their dreams.
Now, for the first time, one may buy standard enclosed models of highest quality at actual open car prices.

Revised prices just announced offer an average reduction of $750 on the enclosed models of the Packard Six—for example, the price of the Seven Passenger
Sedan is reduced $840.
Each car is identical in every way with those Packard has been building during the past year. The prices of all models of the Packard Eight are not affected.

Packard Six and Packard Eight both furnished in two body types,

Encouraged Over Poultry Plague

State Farm School Specialist E. Reeves Prompt Action Helped Conditions on Long Island—Not Spreading Up-State.

The epidemic of European poultry plague is rapidly spreading throughout the Eastern States, according to an announcement made by C. E. Lee, head of the poultry department at the State Institute of Applied Agriculture, Farmingdale, Long Island.

"During the past week we have received a large number of reports from sources believed to be reliable," says Mr. Lee.

"These would indicate that poultry plague has invaded a number of up-state counties in New York. Cases of plague have been reported from Ulster county and points south and east. One of the earlier cases in the state was at Liberty, which is over half way from New York city to Binghamton. We have not discovered any new cases of plague on Long Island this week, though a considerable number of visits to flocks suffering from various diseases have been made by M. Banner, of our department.

"Reports from Pennsylvania indicate considerable infection there, particularly in the Philadelphia section. Pennsylvania declared an embargo on all outside poultry effective December 22.

"Conditions in New Jersey would seem to be about the same as Long Island. New Hampshire has declared an embargo though it is not believed that the disease has yet entered the state. We congratulate the New Hampshire authorities on their prompt action, which will undoubtedly save the poultrymen of their state from serious losses.

"Connecticut newspapers under date of December 22, give the following as a statement by State Commissioner of Domestic Animals Dr. Whittlesey:

"It is evident that the disease has existed for a considerable time in the state of Connecticut. Prof. Roy Jones, of Connecticut Agricultural College, found the disease in a flock of poultry in Waterbury on October 13, and by October 25, 1,000 of the flock had died. Also the poultry specialist has observed as long as last July a peculiar contagious disease in fowl shipments into the state."

The printed report states that "State Commissioner Whittlesey has quarantined 47 poultry premises in Connecticut, affecting about 55,000 fowl. The quarantines are in effect in Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport and Stamford.

"The commissioner has made a partial survey of the state and he estimates that more than 7,000 fowl have already died of the malady in Connecticut."

Mr. Lee feels very much encouraged over the conditions on Long Island this week. It is evident that the prompt and continued action by the state institute poultry department has helped greatly in awakening poultrymen on the island to the necessity of taking all precautions to avoid infection.

DAWNT APPLE TREES

May Appeal to Amateur Grower With Limited Space.

Dwarf apple have no place in commercial orchards in New York when compared with the standard sorts, according to the findings of the horticulturists at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva.

Although the advantages claimed for dwarf trees are such as will appeal to the amateur grower with a small garden space, while the weak-ness of these miniature trees under them is for large plantings, declare the fruit specialists.

Due to the fact that the dwarf trees take less space, a greater vari-city of fruit can be grown in the garden or small orchard than where standard-sized trees are grown. Dwarf apples also make attractive ornaments. If properly cared for, and thus added to their usefulness for home planting. For commercial orchards, however, dwarf trees lack hardiness, are subject to winter-killing, are easily uprooted by wind, tend to produce suckers in abundance, and are no more productive than the standard kinds which do not possess these undesirable traits, it is said.

"Dwarf trees are trees which by various means have been made to grow smaller than normal trees of the same variety," say the station horticulturists. "The dwarf trees are just as healthy and vigorous as normal trees and produce fruit of the same size and quality."

"In America, dwarfing is usually accomplished by grafting clones or cuttings from standard varieties on some root-stock which dwarfs the top. It is usually necessary to resort to summer pruning as well to secure true dwarfs. On the station grounds, the standard trees are grown on the so-called French Crab stock which is widely used in America. Dwarf apples come into bearing slightly earlier than the standard apples, but the difference in this respect is not sufficient to make the dwarf trees any more desirable commercially."

Farmers Giving Help in Census

Good Progress Being Made With Census of Agriculture—Farmers Realize Its Value to Them and Help—Farm Bureaus Cooperating. The federal census of agriculture now being taken is making good progress throughout New York state. The good cooperation generally being shown by farmers in furnishing the necessary information to the enumerators is largely responsible for this.

Emphasizing the need of this census, Howard M. Gore, secretary of agriculture, in a letter from Washington addressed to farmers, writes as follows: "The Department of Agriculture is vitally interested in the Census of Agriculture for which the enumeration is now in progress. Every farmer should also be interested in this work because this census will result in obtaining facts that will lead to a proper understanding of the actual conditions existing throughout the country."

"The census is taken by the Department of Commerce in cooperation with the Department of Agriculture. The schedule of inquiry was approved by the Department of Agriculture, and directed to determine matters of fundamental importance to the welfare of the agricultural industry. This census is needed as a basis for the annual crop estimates of the Department of Agriculture, and it is of great importance that the results be accurate. The totals of farm acreage, land utilization, livestock, crops, etc., will show actual conditions during 1924 and will be used for the preparation of estimates for each year until the next census."

"This census is being taken primarily for the benefit of the farmers. I can assure them that all of the information contained on the census schedule will be treated as strictly confidential and will be used only for statistical purposes to show the totals for the different counties and states. All this information will be directly or indirectly of benefit to the farmers and to farmers' associations and organizations throughout the country. It will help Congress to legislate wisely in matters affecting the farmers' interests."

"I desire therefore to appeal to the farmers to give prompt reply to all of the inquiries on the schedule and in every way possible facilitate the work of the enumerator, so that the census may be taken quickly and that there may be no delay in tabulating the figures and publishing the totals."

In commenting on Secretary Gore's letter, Commissioner Berne A. Pyke of the New York State Department of Farms and Markets, said: "I am in full agreement with Secretary Gore with regard to the census. In an important agricultural state like New York which has a very large city population also, it is especially important that the status of farming be understood, both from the standpoint of the farmer and the consumer."

The county Farm Bureaus are giving the census their wholehearted support and the College of Agriculture has helped in many ways.

SMOKE CLOUD IS OF LITTLE PROTECTION

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

A smoke cloud is of small advantage in retarding radiation of heat on an orchard on frosty nights. This conclusion was reached by the weather bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture after a series of experiments at Edgewood Arsenal, Md. Investigations were carried on jointly by the weather bureau and the chemical warfare service of the army, to establish, if possible, the feasibility of this method of frost protection.

There seems to be a conviction in the minds of many who have had to do with smoke screens such as were used during the war to hide the movement of troops, that orchards and tender vegetation could be protected from frost by this means. It has been thought that a chemically produced smoke cloud would furnish a cheaper, cleaner, and perhaps more effective frost protection than is obtained from burning crude oil or other fuels in small heaters.

In the experiments a field was covered with a dense smoke by burning white phosphorus on nights when conditions favored frost. The temperatures were carefully measured under and in the smoke and also in a nearby field free from smoke.

Results showed that while the smoke cloud decreased the rate of cooling about one-half, it had little effect on the air temperature, probably because of an interchange between the air under the smoke and that outside. The cost of maintaining a dense smoke cover over a field by burning white phosphorus, which was the most economical material available, ranged from $125 to $370 per hour for a 40-acre orchard or $3.15 to $9.40 per acre per hour; whereas the average annual cost of protecting lemon trees by the heater method is known to be about $70 per acre with an average of 16 heatings per year, or $5 per acre per night. The phosphorus is difficult to handle safely, as it ignites at 113 degrees F.

The experiments confirm previous conclusions that the most efficient and economical method of frost protection is to heat the lower layers of the air by burning some form of cheap fuel.

Drainage Is Essential for Peach Orchard Site

In selecting a site for the peach orchard bear in mind that good air drainage is essential. The site must be adjacent to lower land to provide good air drainage, and if at the same time it is protected from the strong prevailing winds so much the better. It is desirable to have the land as level as possible to facilitate cultivation and reduce operating expenses, however, and good air drainage does not mean that the land must be rough and broken. Almost any well-drained soil will grow peaches, but the black prairie lands are not to be recommended. A soil of moderate richness is entirely adequate but it should be in a good state of tilth. The soil must be well supplied with organic matter. Do not set the trees closer together than 20 feet and 25 by 25-foot plantings are often better. Spring planting is safer but fall planting may be practiced in southern Indiana. The tree should be allowed to shed its leaves normally before being dug for setting in the orchard. Shallow setting increases the likelihood of borers working in the roots; set about three inches deeper than they were in the nursery. Dig holes sufficiently large to accommodate the root system. Tramp the earth firmly about the roots from the first few spadefuls until the holes are nearly filled; then fill the remainder with some loose dirt to act as a mulch.

Prevent Injury by Mice by Placing Wire Mesh

Owners of orchards, especially young ones, should be on the lookout for mice and do everything possible to prevent the damage that is done each year by this serious pest. According to C. L. Burkholder of Purdue university the greatest damage done seems to be to trees located in clover or those that have been mulched with straw, clover or alfalfa.

A protection for the trees may be provided by placing ordinary door screen or galvanized wire mesh about the base of the tree. Usually, however, it is only necessary to remove the weeds, grass or mulch around the body of the tree. If this is done, each tree should have about five or six spadefuls of dirt mounded around its base. This simple remedy will not only keep away the mice, but will also strengthen the tree's resistance to the high winds of fall and winter.

Few Rabbits Can Raise Havoc in Young Orchard

Rabbits are a terrible orchard pest in some sections of the country. Just a few rabbits can raise havoc in a young orchard. Where one can afford it, there is probably nothing superior to a rabbit-proof fence. Spraying the trunks of the trees with strong lime and sulphur frequently during the winter tends to keep the rabbits away. Occasionally smearing the trunks of the trees with hog or sheep tallow is said to be efficient.

Colonial Speed Record

There was great excitement in the American colonies in 1796 over the remarkable feat of an express wagon that made the trip from New York city to Philadelphia in the record time of two days.

Mystery in Baseball Scandal

Dolan's Stand Prevents Landis From Going Deeper Into Affairs—What Was Origin of O'Connell's Charges Against Kelly, Frisch and Young?
(By Davis J. Walsh.)

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 12.—Publication of the testimony in the Dolan-O'Connell business by Judge Landis has served only to endow the affair with a deeper air of mystery, according to the findings expressed by our best minds today. O'Connell, without undue parity or preamble, freely admitted his complicity in the transaction and just as freely named a few names.

He charged Cozy Dolan with being the inspiration of the bright idea of fixing a pennant race already pretty thoroughly fixed by natural means, and cited Frank Frisch, Ross Young and George Kelly as accomplices. All four denied the charge but Dolan's reputation lacked both spontaneity and horse sense and he was convicted. The others issued denials of adequate emphasis and were absolved.

In brief, the testimony uncovered nothing beyond what the public had known for months. Yet, the feeling will not down that there is an insidious something lurking in the depths of the entire affair. I think it is safe to assume that Judge Landis feels the same way about it but his hands are tied by lack of a fresh or even a discernible trail.

On the morning the scandal broke the writer had the doubtful pleasure of routing the judge out of his bath in order to inquire for further particulars. Among other things he said:

"I have gone as far as it is humanly possible to go on the evidence presented. But I want you to understand that this case is not closed. It is merely marking time." The testimony bears out Landis in every particular. On the face of it, there was nothing to be done beyond what he did.

Dolan was unable to offer an adequate defense and his replies to questions were such that any jury would have found him guilty. In the case of the three others, it was their word against that of a self-confessed fixer and the judge's course was obvious. He could do no less than take the word of three men, still in good standing, against that of one who was to be cast into the limbo of baseball's forgotten on his own recognition.

Dolan is the keynote of the situation. Standing convicted in the eyes of baseball, he later found tongue to deny any knowledge of the transaction and it is his steadfast claim of innocence that has tied the judge's hands.

Had Dolan confessed, granting that he had anything to confess, the judge could then have carried through Dolan, a deeper investigation into the matter. The alleged man or men "higher up" might have been reached or at least some inkling of his or their identity obtained.

Another dark pocket of the mystery is O'Connell. It was brought out in the testimony that he is of sane mind and is not a drinking man. What, then, was the origin of his charges against Kelly, Frisch and Young? Were they inspired against some unseen hand for the purpose of drawing a red herring across the trail? That is a possibility. Were they an effort on his, O'Connell's part to involve as many as possible in his shame, regardless of their guilt or innocence?

These are only a few of the questions left unanswered by the testimony. The chances are that many of them never will be answered.

HEYDLER DENIES RUMOR LINKING JIMMY RING.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 12.—Denial was made public today by John A. Heydler, president of the National League, of a report that the name of Jimmy Ring, pitcher of the Philadelphia Club, was linked with the baseball scandal which broke on the eve of the last world series. It was charged that a complaint was lodged with Heydler against the performance of Ring against the Brooklyn Club on September 3 last, when he issued twelve bases on balls. It was said that the complaint was made by John McGraw but this was heatedly denied by officials of the Giants. Efforts to reach McGraw by telephone at his Pelham home resulted in the information that the service had been discontinued.

"There always is a lot of talk and all sorts of stories are circulated when things such as this occur in baseball," Heydler said, referring to the Dolan-O'Connell scandal. "I haven't the slightest reason for believing there is any truth in the story. My records will show anyone interested that McGraw made no complaint."

League Games Played at "Y"

Those who were present at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday evening had the pleasure of witnessing one of the best basketball games ever played on the "Y" court when the Intermediate team from the Elmendorf Street Presbyterian Church defeated the Church of the Redeemer five by a 14-12 score. The downtown boys had led throughout the game and with but one minute to go it looked like a Redeemer victory. However, the Presbyterians would not be defeated and they sank two pretty field baskets and won the game just a second before the final whistle blew.
